

CONTESTANTS MOVE FORWARD IN VOTE ACCUMULATION BY LEAPS AND BOUNDS; ONE YOUNG WOMAN ADDS 12,500 MORE

Another One Gains 10,000 Ballots Since Yesterday, and a Third Adds 7,400 to Her List — Miss McAuley and Miss Muffett Exchange Second and First Places

By leaps and bounds the contestants in the Yellowstone Park and Better Times Contest, sponsored by the Bristol Courier and 15 of Bristol's leading merchants, are going forward in their search for votes.

All are aiming at that grand prize, a 10-day trip the forepart of next month to Yellowstone Park, Wyoming.

The largest gain noted since the tabulations of yesterday is made by Miss Doris Fenton, who gaining 12,500 more votes now has a total of 23,200. The next highest "jump" is made by Miss Marion Dugan who with 10,000 additional votes totals 30,500; and the third biggest stride since yesterday is for Miss Ethel Snyder, who went from 8,000 to 15,400, or chalks up a gain of 7,400.

With such big gains daily, no one can predict who the winner will be when the next copy of the Courier arrives. At present the leader is Miss Mary McAuley, who went from second to first place, and now has 35,600 votes to her credit. Second place is held by Miss Janice M. Muffett, whose total today is 33,800, she having relinquished first position since yesterday.

Miss Clara Gleason, Croydon, and Miss Jeanne LaPolla, 207 Wood street, are new ones in the field, each starting off today with 1100 votes.

The race is on in earnest, and thousands upon thousands of votes are being chalked up daily. Shoppers at the Bristol stores where ballots are given out, are urged to ask for the ballots, and to use them in voting for their favorite contestants, thus helping the young women as they seek this trip of trips.

CAMP BUCCOU OPENS FOR NINTH SEASON

Five Troops Comprise The "Pioneer" Group Now In Camp

PROGRAM IS ARRANGED

Camp Buccou, the Bucks County Boy Scout Council Camp, opened for the ninth season on Sunday. Five troops comprised "the pioneer" group. Sellersville is being led the earlier part of the week by Scoutmaster Frank B. Jackson, and during the latter part of the week by Assistant Scoutmaster Kenneth Minniger, occupying the Camp Lookout site. Assistant Scoutmaster Howard Holbrook, of Warrington, is camp leader in the Forest View camp, with the Scouts from his troop in Hartsville. The Scout Camp in the Valley is the camping area of New Hope under assistant scoutmaster Robert Higgins. Scouts of New Britain are housed in Mountain View with chairman of the troop committee Andrew Y. Michie as their camp scoutmaster. The most rustic camp at Buccou, the Stockade, shelters assistant scoutmaster Sydney Smyth, and the Siles Scouts.

The program at Buccou has been arranged for all Scouts to be able to pass Scoutcraft projects during the morning and the afternoon for fun and recreation, and the evenings for adventure and inspiration. All second and first class Scoutcraft requirements can be passed. The merit badge opportunities include: athletics, basketry, bird study, bookbinding, botany, hunting, camping, carpentry, conservation, cooking, first aid, forestry, insect life, leathercraft, life saving, metal work, personal health, physical development, pioneering, public health, reptile study, signaling, swimming, woodcraft and woodworking.

Believing that through "round-robin" tournaments, Scouts learn team play, enjoy fellowship, and initiative, each week every troop selects teams for competitions. Tournament directors for the first week include: soccer, chairman, Andrew Michie; touch football, patrol leader, Joseph Walter; soft ball, assistant scoutmaster, Robert Higgins; horse shoes, junior assistant Scoutmaster John Harkness; and volleyball ball, junior assistant scoutmaster Robert Turner.

Assistant Scoutmaster William Carlin, Chalfont, is the Buccou superintendent, being responsible for the buildings, grounds, and the season staff. There are three leaders on the 1935 season staff: Scoutmaster William Lyndall, of Bristol, directing boats, canoes, activities, and sanitation facilities; Assistant Scoutmaster William Palmer, of Langhorne, as store keeper and quartermaster; and junior assistant Scoutmaster William Hagar, of Langhorne, crafts director.

New Hope scored the highest in the personal inspection of head, hands, uniform, and insignia following Monday evening dress parade. Second place went to Hartsville, and third was taken by New Britain. The exhibition drill was won by Hartsville; second, Siles, and third, Sellersville.

OUR FEDERAL DANGER

By LEWIS W. DOUGLAS

Former Director of the United States Budget
In an Address at Chicago

In 1931, the Federal Government incurred a deficit of 900 millions of dollars.

In 1932, the deficit had risen to over three billions of dollars.

In 1933, again the deficit was more than three billions of dollars.

In 1934, it was almost four billions of dollars.

And during the fiscal year 1935, the estimated deficit is four billions. As a matter of fact, it probably will not exceed three billion 500 million.

In 1936, the estimated deficit is four and a half billions of dollars; and in all reasonable expectancy, in view of the obligations already created, which must then be liquidated, the deficit will approximate that figure.

Now, THE MERE SIZE of these deficits is enough to arouse our interest, if not an anxiety. But there are other things about them which on analysis should increase our anxiety.

Up through 1934, a large part of the deficits were incident to Reconstruction Finance expenditures, a portion of which it is reasonable to expect will be repaid into the Treasury of the United States.

But in 1935, of the deficit of approximately three and a half billions, only 350 millions will be accounted for by Reconstruction Finance Corporation expenditures.

In 1936, assuming the Reconstruction Finance Corporation still continues to make loans, there will be estimated net repayments in the amount of 150 millions.

Now, these are interesting figures, because they bear evidence that brings us to the conclusion—and the conclusive evidence—that WHILE THE DEFICITS HAVE BEEN INCREASING, that portion of them which may be repaid to the Treasury HAS BEEN DECREASING, or—stated in another way—that that portion of the deficit created by expenditures which generate vested interests has been increasing, while the type of expenditure which creates no vested interest has been decreasing.

And it is pretty conclusive evidence to support the conclusion that the Administration has embarked upon a deliberate policy of spending, upon a policy of spending as an instrument of recovery.

* * *

Now, this policy must be viewed in the environment in which it exists.

While the fiscal policy alone is enough to arouse apprehension, it is not sufficient to judge it as an isolated act of government.

Contrary, it must be viewed in terms of an Administration which has openly advocated inflation as an instrument of recovery; it must be viewed in the light of an Administration which is drifting rapidly, if it has not already approached the point of reverting, to bimetalism; it must be viewed in the

PLANS TO OPERATE BUS LINE THROUGH BRISTOL

Richmond Bus Lines Granted Amended Permit In Morrisville

TO RUN TO TORRESDALE

MORRISVILLE, July 3.—Israel Richmond, owner of the Richmond Lines, has announced that he expects to inaugurate bus service from Trenton to Torresdale and also from Trenton to Newtown in the near future.

The Richmond Bus Lines, which operate between here and Trenton and Yardley and Trenton, has been granted by the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania an amended permit for the modification of its original route in Pennsylvania.

The amended permit allows the Richmond Lines to operate in Morrisville over the route now used which follows: From the State line on the Calhoun street bridge to Trenton avenue, west on Trenton avenue to Pennsylvania avenue, south on Pennsylvania avenue to Delaware avenue; east on Delaware avenue to Washington street; north on Washington street to Bridge street; east on Bridge street to North Delmor Avenue; north on North Delmor Avenue to the Calhoun street bridge and back to Trenton.

The original permit was given the Richmond Lines October 30, 1934, but this called for a route west of the present route and an application was made for an amended route.

Following the filing of the application for the amended route by Richmond, the Delaware River Coach Company, which also operates a bus line between Morrisville and Trenton and Yardley and Trenton, made application for the restoration of its permit which was to cover the same route used by the Richmond Lines but no decision has yet been announced in the Delaware River case.

GAS MASK SELLERS HELP SPREAD FEAR OF CLOUD ATTACKS

No One Knows Whether Costly Devices Now Being Sold Will Work In Time of Danger From Skies

This is another of a series of articles on what is being done to prepare women and children and other non-combatants for the horrors of the coming war. Staff correspondents of International News Service reveal heretofore unpublished facts concerning the mobilization of entire populations for conflict. The articles deal with London, Paris, Berlin, Moscow and other cities. Today the third and last dispatch from Paris is presented; tomorrow Berlin will be the subject.

PARIS, July 3.—(INS)—One hundred airplanes, each carrying a ton of war gas, could cover Paris with a blanket of poisonous vapor 65 feet high, and if the wind is not strong, Paris would be exterminated inside of an hour. This warning of Prof. Paul Langevin, member of the College de France, is only one of numerous statements made by authorities which have cast fear in military and civilian circles in France whether the population "behind the lines" can be saved if a new war breaks out.

Only 40 tons of certain of the newest gases would be required to wipe out Paris, Marcel Capron, left-wing member, told the Chamber of Deputies.

The new technique of passive defense, made obligatory by law, is something new in war and whether or not it can succeed is a question to military and civilian authorities. Pierre Cot, long time minister of air, explained the situation as follows: "Passive defense is a necessity. We must be sure to have it, but we must not be too confident in it. Good defense against air attack is active de-

REGISTER NOW OR LOSE RELIEF, IS THE FINAL WARNING

One Hundred and Thirty-Nine Cases in Bucks Still Unregistered

96 IN LOWER END

A Few More Days Are Given For Those Still Off The List

Unless those who are receiving relief register with the National Re-employment Service their relief will be discontinued and this is likely to happen to 139 cases in Bucks County, according to an announcement made today by those in charge of emergency relief in area 16, embracing Bucks and Montgomery counties.

In the upper end of Bucks County there are still 43 not registered and in the lower end, 96. These 139 cases are being given one more chance to register with the Re-employment Service before their relief is stopped. "It is felt that they are in the rural districts and it has been difficult for them to meet the registration officer," says the statement.

Almost everyone receiving emergency relief in area 16 has not registered with the National Re-employment Service. Final check-ups are being made within the next seven days by the Relief Investigators.

In the two relief districts with headquarters at Norristown and Ardmore every employable person who can work has been registered. In the district with headquarters at Pottstown, there are still 12 persons who have not been able to get in to register, and in the district with headquarters at Glenside, there are 11 who have not registered.

In Montgomery County 25 cases have been closed because they have refused to register with the Re-employment Service.

He Lands One of Four Fish Hooked

(By "The Stroller")

Fishermen always talk about the big ones which got away but here is an actual experience two prominent Bristol Rotarians had yesterday while fishing at Penn's Manor.

The two set out for a good day's sport and first one of the pair hooked a fine big perch. The fish was pulled into the boat but in endeavoring to put the slippery denizen of the deep into the box, the fisherman lost the perch, which jumped overboard.

Well, of course, the angler was a little peeved but only uttered a mild remonstrance.

Then the same fisherman a few minutes later caught a bass which also leaped back into the pond, while an effort was being made to put him into the boat.

Well, this time the fisherman was a little more peeved—he was provoked, and uttered his protest in a little louder voice.

It was but a short while before the fisherman had hooked a third fish and he was determined to land this one which also was a bass. But this one, profiting by the experience of his predecessors caught in a similar predicament, likewise jumped off the hook, back into the water.

Well, this time the fisherman was more than provoked and uttered his protest in even a louder voice than he had the other two times.

He finally landed a fine big calico bass.

The unlucky fisherman's companion and fellow Rotarian caught one fish but landed this one, and he was entertained by the balance of the time by the predicaments of his fishing pal.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3, 1935

JULY FOURTH

Sturdy old John Adams, writing to his wife following the action of the continental congress in declaring the colonies independent of English rule, envisioned the character which the celebration of the event would assume in later years. "I am apt to believe," he said, "that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to Almighty God. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations from one end of this country to the other, from this time forward forevermore."

And, in fact, the celebration of the birth of the nation's independence did take on exactly that character. For many years the day was filled with exciting events and the minds of the people dwelt upon the greatness, the patriotism and the courage of those men who had built the new nation.

But with the passing of years came changes in customs, and the manner in which the anniversary of the nation's birth is observed has changed accordingly. Municipalities, seeking to safeguard the lives of their children, have banned fireworks, unless under official auspices. Exhausted treasuries have in many instances made it impossible to hire bands, hold public celebrations and present brilliant pyrotechnic displays at night.

In fact, the observance of Independence Day has become rather subdued, in keeping, perhaps, with the spirit of the people after four years of bitter trial and struggle, and in many instances there is nothing on the day's program other than an automobile ride out into the country—no noise and din, music and games, guns, bells, bonfires or other illuminations.

But perhaps the old patriot, Mr. Adams, would not be keenly disappointed at the change if he could but peer beneath externals and observe that the spirit, which, after all, is the vital thing, is essentially the same as that which found expression more than a century and a half ago in a forthright demand for freedom.

Surely, no thoughtful person could consider the fortune of the American people under the strain and trials of these last four years—years of intense mental suffering and even of physical privation—without concluding that it must have been a somewhat similar spirit that enabled struggling colonists to persevere against all adversities to the glorious end.

THE "IFS" IN A SANE FOURTH

If every possible preventive measure is taken against injury by fireworks and firearms—

If equally earnest efforts are exerted to prevent fires—

If motorists obey traffic regulations and speed laws and check their inclination to hog the highway and make fender-bending passes—

If canoeists decide for once not to rock the boat—

If non-swimmers determine to keep within their depth—

Then citizens will at least have made an excellent start toward achieving the ideal of safety and sanity in celebrating the Fourth of July. It is possible only if everyone starts now to plan to do his part.

declared by Andre Marty, Paris councilman, after a study, and they are expensive. They sell for from $8 to $15 each.

"It is admitted by technicians," he declared, "that there are now 20 kinds of war gas with arsine and yperite as a base. These can be divided into three groups, and each requires a special mask."

While gas masks now are standard items in all department stores and large drugstores in Paris, and are being hawked by salesmen all over the country, Cot, speaking on behalf of the chamber commission of aeronautics, warned the public:

"It is necessary to put the civil population on guard, not only against the danger from the air, which is a real danger, but also against certain dealers in gas masks who are not supervised and whose products are dangerous."

The demand has fallen off now, but when salesmen first made tours of offices in Paris offering to sell masks for all the staff, thousands of gas masks were sold. In one of the oldest and most densely populated sections of Paris, this correspondent saw gas masks in department stores on exhibit in the drug department, in one instance alongside corn cures, and in the other in a display counter for home-made cures.

A large firm with offices close to the elite Champs-Elysees near the Arc de Triomphe, gave over a large part of its space to gas masks. Not only were the masks exhibited, but wax figures of men and women were shown dressed in the best "passive defense attire," with the snouts of gas masks on their noses, and the material of their coats made to resist burning vapors.

Pamphlets are given out in shops advertising the gas masks and showing how to wear them. But no one knows whether these masks will afford any real protection against the horrors to come.

The enterprising gas-mask salesmen have helped to spread alarm over possible air attacks into the smaller cities. However, those adopting passive defense measures in less densely populated areas are doing so with lighter heart than Parisians.

"Gas clubs" organized on the Riviera to conduct anti-air attack drills, have made defense practice a new sport, which according to what one dwager there told International kind of an Administration which is supporting and recommending a banking bill which, among other things, is designed for the purpose of assuring the ability of the Administration to finance a continued huge spending policy.

And if there are any who here doubt it, doubt that statement, I refer them to the testimony of the Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank before the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

This is the environment in which this policy of deliberate spending must be viewed and must be judged. And in that environment it becomes more significant and properly should arouse more anxiety than it otherwise would.

This is a serious situation.

It is a serious condition, when a government fits into a general inflationary policy one of deliberate spending as a method of effecting a recovery.

It is serious, if for no other reason than that it has universally been the rule that wherever and whenever governments have continually expended more than they have taken in, they have finally plunged their country into a destructive inflation.

THERE IS NO EXCEPTION IN THE HISTORY OF MANKIND TO THAT GENERAL RULE.

We have much evidence of it in our own experience.

Whenever and wherever, it made no difference how different the conditions may have been, governments have continuously expended more than they have taken in, they have plunged their people into a destructive inflation of one kind or of another.

And the effect almost invariably has been THE DESTRUCTION OR PARTIAL DESTRUCTION OF THE MIDDLE CLASS.—New York American, July 1, 1935.

CHAPTER XXXVII

The day of the Vane murder trial dawned dark and stormy. It looked as though a blizzard would break over the city before the day was over. The wind was high and blustering, and short brisk showers of ice-like sleet cut the face like little cold whip-lashes from heaven.

As Betty Potter walked into the court room in the Central Criminal Court, the crowd of the curious was already gathering and swelling rapidly by the minute.

Betty felt a wave of disgust at her fellow men and women, as she looked around the room, and noticed faces that had long been familiar to her and to her friends; people who could not possibly be of any assistance in this ordeal, through which their friend must go; people who tried by their well-dressed air of aloof interest, to veil the avid curiosity in their eyes.

"Vultures!" she repeated to herself. "Just so many vultures, waiting for a chance to get at the defenseless body."

She made up her mind, then and there, that after this one assignment was over, she would resign. She felt that never, so long as she lived, did she want to hear the word "scoundrel" again.

She studied the faces of the jury, as that august body of twelve filed in.

Betty's heart sank. Never before had she so loved Lawrence Vane as she did at that moment; for now, added to her girl's love, was the passionate, protective love of a woman, whose beloved is menaced. Betty had grown up greatly. She was conscious of an almost maternal instinct to fight for this man, who, now in his trouble, seemed to belong to her.

The District Attorney and his assistants arrived, and he bowed formally to her, no smile lightening his face.

The defense attorney arrived, and there was a great arranging of papers by the two opposing forces.

The two attorneys chatted, and Betty could have screamed aloud when she heard one say:

"Did it in eighty-six!" and the D. A.'s casual reply:

"That's a bad water hazard they've got out there."

She twisted around and studied the room again. Was Uncle Cyrus never coming? She could not understand him.

He had been out of town for a week, on some mysterious mission, and his old butler, in answer to her repeated questionings, had told her that Mr. Cyrus had packed an overnight bag and had gone some place by plane.

Just before the court rose for the entrance of His Honor, she saw the well-built little figure slip, quietly and unobtrusively, into the room, and take a seat in an inconspicuous corner.

She gasped, and felt tears sting her lids, as Lawrence Vane came in under escort, and took his seat at counsel table with his attorneys. His pallor and his shadowed eyes, but most of all the proud lift to his chin, as he looked over the room, tore at her heart.

In his opening declaration, State's Attorney Turnbull told the jurors he would prove the murder of Isobel Vane, by her husband Lawrence Vane. He told them that he would bring witnesses who could testify to the fact that Vane had every reason for wishing to do away with his wife, and that on several occasions he had been heard to threaten her. In spite of the de-capitation of the body, and the inability of the prosecutor to produce the head, nevertheless they had positive identification of the body by the victim's own mother.

He told them that the accused, Lawrence Vane, was under the influence of veronal when he first discovered her, and that, in spite of his denials, that he had, ever either purchased or taken the drug, they would hear the evidence of the chemist who sold him the bottle, proving that he had, in fact, purchased it himself a few nights before the murder.

He told them that Vane was alone with the murdered woman in his penthouse apartment from approximately five o'clock in the afternoon, until the arrival of the police shortly after midnight, when they found Mrs. Vane's headless body.

Defense counsel indicated that they would prove that Lawrence Vane was innocent of the charge brought against him by the State, that he was the victim of a plot to ruin him, and of circumstantial evidence.

To Betty, as she wrote it all down for her paper, it seemed hopeless, and the statement of the defense sounded very weak in her ears.

The first witnesses called by the D. A. were purely perfunctory. Officers Murphy and Larkin, followed by Inspector Ingles who testified as to Vane's arrest, told of their finding the headless naked body on the roof terrace, and of the dazed condition of Vane.

In each case, the defense waived cross-examination, and made no objections to any questions asked by the D. A.

"Dr. Gilbraith, please take the stand," said the D. A.

The doctor placed his hand over the Bible held out to him by the court attendant, and took the oath in a perfunctory way, as one who was so used to these proceedings that he was bored with them before they started.

Preliminaries as to his qualifications to practise in the State of New York over the D. A. asked:

"Dr. Gilbraith? Can you tell the Court what, in your opinion, caused the death of the deceased woman?"

"She did not die a natural death," said the doctor. "At the autopsy there was no evidence of poison, or any organic defect. As, however, the head was missing, it was not possible for me to give a full autopsy report."

"Is it your opinion, therefore, doctor, that this woman was killed by some injury to her head?"

"Yes," snapped the doctor. "She may have been shot, or felled by some heavy blow. Her skull may have been fractured. She may have been strangled or smothered, but it is certain that she died as the result of some injury to the missing organ, the head."

"Why do you think this, doctor?"

"Because the head was removed. This was obviously done to hide the method of killing."

The D. A. asked a few more questions, and then turned the witness over to the defense.

Defense counsel rose and asked: "Dr. Gilbraith? At the autopsy, was there any trace of cocaine in the body of the deceased?"

"None at all," snapped Gilbraith. "Nor of any other drug."

"And if the deceased had been a drug addict, that would have shown up in the autopsy, would it not?"

"Yes, it would."

"Thank you. That is all," said the defense.

As the doctor was rising, the defense attorney turned back and asked one more question.

"Could not the head of the murdered woman have been removed to hinder identification?"

"That is possible," said the doctor.

"That is all." And the defense sat down.

"Mrs. Mackenzie!" called the usher.

Necks craned forward to see this witness. Who could this be? And what could a woman who looked so bedraggled and so cheaply dressed, have to do with fashionable society as Vane and his beautiful dead wife?

The queer little old woman, with her run-down shoes and her cheap fur boa, looked like a scrub woman. She marched up and took the oath boldly, leaning over her at the same time out of small red-rimmed eyes.

"You are Mrs. Mackenzie, the mother of Isobel Mackenzie Vane?"

A gasp went around the room, and so much moving back and forth in seats, that the Court rapped for order.

"Did you view the body of the deceased woman at the Morgue?"

"Yes. That I did." Her thin lips closed in a turtle-like snap.

"Did you recognize that body, Mrs. Mackenzie?"

"I did. The Lord save me. 'Twas that of my daughter Isobel."

"Are you sure of this, Mrs. Mackenzie?"

"And who should ken a daughter better than her mother, sir?"

The D. A. took a photograph from his papers, and showed it to the little old woman.

"Mrs. Mackenzie," he said, "I show you here a photograph of a child of three, without clothes. Will you tell the Court who it is?"

She took it, and squinted at it briefly.

"It was my daughter Isobel, when she was a wee mite," she said.

"Can you tell the Court why you are so sure that the body of the deceased is that of your daughter?"

"Here's the very same birthmark under the left breast. She always had it."

The D. A. turned the witness over to the defense.

"Mrs. Mackenzie," the defense asked, "how long is it since you last saw your daughter Isobel?"

The little shrewd eyes of the old woman flickered.

"Seven years if it is a day," she answered.

"When you saw her then, Mrs. Mackenzie, did you see your daughter without clothes?"

"No—and why should I?" she snapped.

"Thank you. That will be all," said the defense, and the witness stepped down, her one day with the public eye over and done with forever.

One or two more witnesses were called by Turnbull, to tell of Isobel's method of life before she married Vane, and of his reclusive-like way of living. This was to establish motive for his having killed his wife, when he discovered that she was a widow.

Then the D. A. gave a name to the clerk who called:

"Mr. Roger Thornley!"

Betty looked up and with difficulty suppressed an exclamation. Roger Thornley and the State? What could this mean?

"Your name is Roger Thornley?" asked Turnbull.

"Yes," Thornley's voice was sultry.

"What is your business, Mr. Thornley?"

"I am a construction engineer."

"You have your own business?"

"Yes. The Thornley Construction Company."

"Mr. Thornley," the D. A. leaned towards him, "do you know the defendant in this case?"

"Yes. I know him. Lawrence Vane."

"Did you know his wife?"

"Yes. Slightly." Thornley was sure of himself.

A look of intense surprise swept over Betty's face, as well as over the faces of several others in the court room at this answer. Several there knew of the swift and flaming affair between the young contractor and Isobel.

"You are married, Mr. Thornley?"

"Yes. I am. And my wife was a great friend of Mrs. Vane's. They were together in the theatre for many years."

"Is your wife with you in town, Mr. Thornley?"

"No. My wife is on a trip to China," said Roger Thornley.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

At court recess, the spectators filed out with a buzzing of hurried conversation, like children let out of school, and the D. A. had a good look at the big man on the stand.

Betty gave Vane a warm hand-clasp as she passed before him, and his eyes followed her with a pathetic look of despair and devotion.

She sought out Cyrus K. at once. "Uncle Cyrus," she said furiously. "What are the attorneys thinking of? Why haven't they challenged anything the D. A. has done? They just sit there like so many bumps on a log, and let the State get away with everything. What's the matter with them anyway?"

"Now, keep your hair on, Bet," he told her. "We know what we are doing. I must go and see the boy now, and cheer him up."

He started away, then turned back and beckoned her close with one crooked finger.

"Want a scoop for your paper?" he whispered.

"Oh! Just as if you'd give me one!" she cried, tears in her eyes.

"Better take it and use it, Betty. You'll be the first one to know, and it can't come out in time to do any harm."

"Well, go on—tell me," she told him impatiently. "I suppose that's the only way I'll get any news out of you. What is it?"

"Defense to use surprise witness," he told her, and walked swiftly away, leaving her staring after him.

However, knowing him as she did, she telephoned the news to her editor before going back to the court room.

The trial re-opened with Roger Thornley on the stand. To anyone who knew him, it could be seen that he had wasted no time in discovering a café near the courthouse.

"Mr. Thornley," the D. A. took up the questioning. "Do you say that your wife was a very dear friend of the dead woman's?"

"Yes."

"Did she have the confidence of the deceased?"

"She did. Absolutely."

"Can you tell the

Declaration of Independence

IN CONGRESS JULY 4, 1776

THE UNANIMOUS DECLARATION OF THE THIRTEEN UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

WHEN, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.—We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.—That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.—That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security.—Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.—He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.—He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.—He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.—He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.—He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.—He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected;—whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the meantime exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without and convulsions within.—He has endeavored to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.—He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws, for establishing Judiciary powers.—He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.—He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.—He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislatures.—He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to Civil power.—He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our Laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation:—For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us;—For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:—For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world:—For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent:—For depriving us in many cases of the benefits of Trial by Jury:—For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences:—For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighboring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies:—For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments:—For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.—He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us.—He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the Lives of our people.—He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to compleat the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty & perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous age, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation.—He has constrained our fellow-citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.—He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions. In every stage of these Oppressions we have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people. Nor have we been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their Legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which, would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War; in Peace, Friends.—

We, therefore, the Representatives of the united States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our Intentions, do, in the name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be, FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do.—And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor.

BRISTOL LEGION JUNIORS LOSE FIFTH STRAIGHT

By Louis Tomlinson

Bristol's Junior American Legion team again went down to defeat for the fifth consecutive time after winning their first three games. It was Quakertown who gave them their fifth straight setback on the latter's field last night before a large crowd. The boys of Bobby Hems have now a record of three victories and five defeats in league competition this season so far.

Pat McGahan again started—and finished—for the locals despite a bad second inning when the home boys got to him for a quiet of runs to clinch the game. Pat allowed only seven hits, fanned three, walked two and hit two. He really deserved better fate than he received but for that bad second he might have been victorious. Quakertown got three of their hits in this inning and together with a pass, a fielder's choice and an error thrown in garnered their five runs and victory.

Pitted against McGahan was Dick Hanselman who gave up six hits, walked two and fanned five in gaining his victory. He too had a bad inning, the first, in which Bristol got their only runs on two hits and two errors. After that he settled down and pitched good ball the rest of the game and really should have had a shut-out but for two errors he was deprived of it. Dick also did himself well at bat by getting one of the seven hits and scoring two runs to help in his own victory.

BEES ARREST THIEVES

PRAGUE — (INS) — Bees caused the arrest of a gang of thieves at Hodonin. The house of Matous Katat, was broken into by three men, who carried off a sackful of valuables. As the men were making their escape over the garden wall, the sack-carrier slipped on the rain-soaked ground, and in so doing knocked over a beehive. Next day the police had only to arrest three men whose faces were swollen to an undistinguishable size.

GERHART WEAKENS; BRISTOL A. A. WINS

Gene Gerhart weakened in the sixth inning last night as the Bristol A. A. club scored two runs to eke out a close 4-3 over Newportville A. A. in a Lower Bucks County League tilt played on Leedom's field.

Gerhart who relieved "Howie" Williams after the latter who gone sour in the third was charged with the defeat as the former Tacony Robbins hurler held a 3-2 lead when he left the hill. Gerhart was sent in with the bags loaded and managed to retire the side without further scoring. Again in the fifth, the A. A. loaded the sacks on Gerhart but the bespectacled hurler of Newportville was equal to the task and set down three batters without a score being made.

In the sixth, the tide changed. After Tryon hit the rolled out, Dougherty walked and stole second. Stromp singled and Dougherty crossed with the tying run. Heftman also singled and Stromp was held at third. Heftman tried for second, but was put out. Gerhart to States. Stromp scored on the play at second. Dugan also singled but could not advance.

"Spike" Tryon was credited with the victory although he received some assistance from Ralph Stromp. Stromp took up the hill burden in the third when Tryon was touched for three tallies. Tryon moved to right field but at the beginning of the fifth again toed the slab and retired the Newporters the remainder of the game without further tallying.

The Newportville club scored their three markers as a result of a walk to Williams, a hit batsman, and consecutive bingles by W. Ritter, G. Ritter, Robinson and Mellor.

Tiger Twirlers

By BURNLEY

Sly old Cy Perkins and brainy Mickey Cochrane, two of the best backstops of modern times, are naturally very well equipped to develop hurling talent. Nobody knows better than these two how to handle pitchers in order to bring out their best and most effective twirling.

Evidence of their ability in this way can be seen in the brilliant mound work of slim Tom Bridges, frail right-hander of the Detroit team, who appears well on his way to the American League pitching crown at this writing.

Bridges, who tips the scales at only a little over 140 pounds, was considered too small to make good as a big league slasher, for size and weight are usually necessary requisites for a successful major league hurler.

For several years it seemed as if the wise boys who said that Bridges couldn't make the grade were right. He had a tendency to wildness that often proved his undoing; and he didn't seem strong enough to last the full nine innings under pressure.

However, Cochrane and Perkins took him in hand last year and worked patiently to build up Tommy's confidence. They added greatly to his knowledge of how to work on batters, and he learned to conserve his energy on the mound so that he found it much easier to go the route.

This season the frail Tiger right-hander has really come into his own as a great mound mechanic. Always possessing an abundance of stuff, Bridges now knows how to use it to the best advantage, and is just about the top man among American League moundmen at present.

Cochrane and Perkins are now engaged in bringing out another young hurling star in the left-handed person of Joe Sullivan, one of the best pitching prospects of the year. Sullivan has turned in some beautifully pitched games this season, and has rarely been hit hard, though he has been the victim of tough luck in losing several close pitching battles.

The Tiger youngster seems sure to chalk up a very good earned-run mark in his first big league season.

TO GIVE EXHIBITION OF ROPE CLIMBING

Roman "Frit" Pico, who recently broke the world's record in rope-climbing, will give an exhibition of this event tomorrow afternoon as the St. Ann's Athletic Association holds an afternoon of fine entertainment. Pico, who looms as an Olympic candidate for rope-climbing, will scale a 25-foot rope in the rear of the newly-built St. Ann's club-house.

Amateur boxing will feature the afternoon. Candidates for the different classes in weight have been received and again final notice is given that tonight is the closing time for the registering of applications. The fighters will be weighed in tomorrow afternoon.

Besides the rope-climbing exhibition and boxing, there will be wrestling matches, pie and watermelon contests, potato-sack race, tennis games, and bocce games. All this is free to the public. Prizes will be awarded to the winners of the events which will begin at one o'clock sharp.

WALTHAM, Mass. — (INS) — "You were a sap to leave the house to me." This was the receipt for a watch, chain and clothes valued at $100 taken from the home of Harlan C. Goodwin by a roamer.

EDGELEY BRIVES BATTLE HULMEVILLE TO A TIE

The Edgely Braves and Hulmeville A. A. battled to a 3-3 deadlock last night on the Edgely diamond. The Braves failed to hold an early 3-0 advantage over the first half champions. "Kenny" Hill starred at second base for the Edgelyites, handling ten chances without a mis-slip. Another, Morrisville youth, Russ Malmbsbury led with the stick, getting two bingles in two official trips to the platter. One of Malmbsbury's drives was a long triple to left which accounted for the Edgelyites' final tally.

The Hulmeville team after spotting the Braves three tallies in the first two cantoes, scored twice in the third when Andy was hit with a pitched ball, advanced on a sacrifice, a fielder's choice, a walk to Carlen and a single by Hemp. In the sixth, the Blackmen deadlocked the count on consecutive singles by Watson, Afterbach and Comly.

"Wils" Holland did the twirling for the Hulmevilleites with "Jackie" Praul doing the mound work for the Edgelyites. The Braves were credited with two fast double-plays.

And So to Bed

"Well," thought Bill Robinson, "that's a load off my mind. I've been going to do that for weeks, and now I'm glad that it's accomplished."

And so he rolled over for a good night's contented sleep. Of course, he was referring to life insurance, and particularly a policy in "The Industrial" and "The State Mutual," because for weeks he had been planning to take out these policies but somehow he never seemed able to get around to it. Now it is done; he has his "Industrial" and "State Mutual" policies; and he can rest assured that the future welfare of his family is well taken care of.

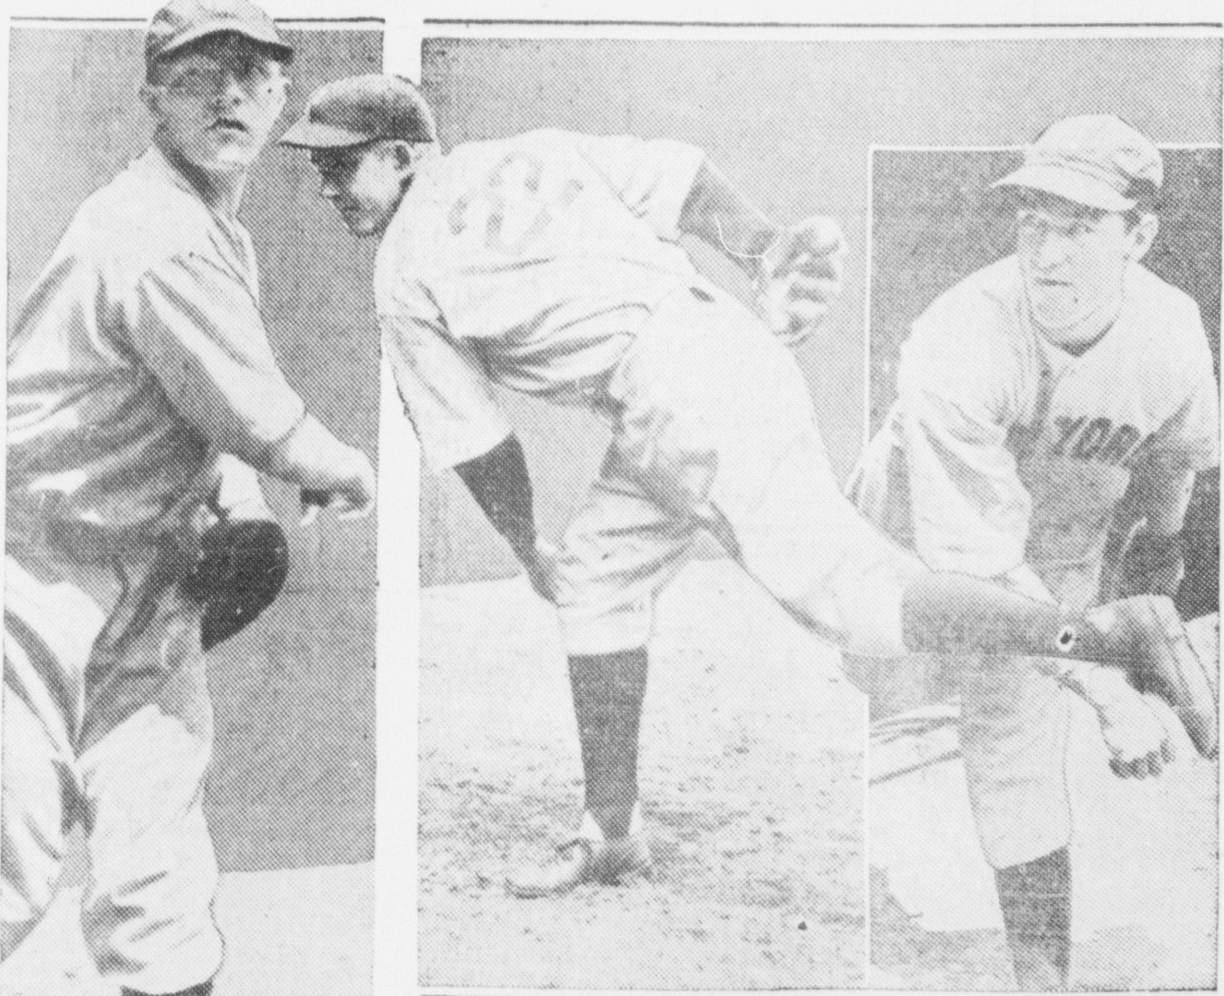

Have you provided for yours—have you been putting it off too? Insure today—then keep your premiums up to date—a policy out of benefit is of no use to any one!

Three Rookies Bulwark of Yankee Strength

Vito Tamulis

Johnnie Murphy

Johnny Broaca

These three young pitchers have proven a bulwark of strength for the New York Yankees and kept them in the running despite mediocre hitting by their teammates. Johnny Broaca, left; Vito Tamulis, center, and Johnnie Murphy, each of them rookies, have accounted for a large number of the Yankee wins by their crack pitching. Broaca and Murphy are right handers; Tamulis is a lefty.
